Breakthrough

Sanders' breakthrough came in 1976 when he wrote the screenplay for the film "Rocky." The film was a huge critical and commercial success, and it earned Sanders an Academy Award for Best Original Screenplay. "Rocky" is a classic underdog story about a small-time boxer who gets a chance to fight for the heavyweight championship. The film is full of heart and humor, and it features some of the most iconic scenes in film history. Sanders followed up the success of "Rocky" with a number of other successful films, including "Raging Bull" (1980), "The Natural" (1984), and "Field of Dreams" (1989).

Style

Sanders' writing style is characterized by its lyrical beauty, its emotional depth, and its exploration of the human condition. He often uses poetic language to create a sense of atmosphere and mood in his films. His characters are often complex and flawed, and they are often struggling with their own personal demons. Sanders' films are often about the human spirit, and they explore the themes of hope, redemption, and forgiveness.
