

The Special Counsel Robert Muller Final Report on Collusion Between Donald Trump and Russia

The Special Counsel Robert Mueller's Final Report on Collusion Between Donald Trump and Russia is a comprehensive report that details the findings of the investigation into Russian interference in the 2016 presidential election. The report concludes that Russia interfered in the election in a "sweeping and systematic fashion," but did not find sufficient evidence to establish that Trump or his campaign conspired or coordinated with Russia.

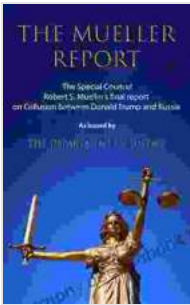

Key Findings

- Russia interfered in the 2016 presidential election in a "sweeping and systematic fashion."
- The Russian government interfered in the election with the goal of helping Donald Trump win.
- The Trump campaign did not conspire or coordinate with Russia in its election interference activities.
- The investigation did not establish that Trump obstructed justice.

Background

The investigation into Russian interference in the 2016 presidential election began in July 2016, when the FBI opened a counterintelligence investigation into possible coordination between the Trump campaign and Russia. In May 2017, Robert Mueller was appointed as Special Counsel to oversee the investigation.

The investigation was wide-ranging and included interviews with hundreds of witnesses, the review of millions of documents, and the execution of dozens of search warrants. The report released by Mueller in April 2019 is the culmination of the investigation.

Findings

The report concludes that Russia interfered in the 2016 presidential election in a "sweeping and systematic fashion." The Russian government used a variety of methods to interfere in the election, including hacking into the computer systems of the Democratic National Committee and the Clinton campaign, releasing stolen emails, and spreading disinformation on social media.

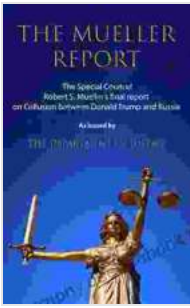

The report also concludes that the Russian government interfered in the election with the goal of helping Donald Trump win. The report states that "the Russian government's efforts to interfere in the 2016 presidential election were 'sweeping and systematic,' and that its goal was to 'help Donald Trump win the election.'"

However, the report did not find sufficient evidence to establish that Trump or his campaign conspired or coordinated with Russia in its election interference activities. The report states that "the investigation did not establish that members of the Trump Campaign conspired or coordinated with the Russian government in its election interference activities."

The report also did not establish that Trump obstructed justice. The report states that "while this report does not conclude that the President committed a crime, it also does not exonerate him."

The Special Counsel Robert Mueller's Final Report on Collusion Between Donald Trump and Russia is a comprehensive report that details the findings of the investigation into Russian interference in the 2016 presidential election. The report concludes that Russia interfered in the election in a "sweeping and systematic fashion," but did not find sufficient evidence to establish that Trump or his campaign conspired or coordinated with Russia.

The report is a significant document that sheds light on one of the most important events in recent American history. It is a must-read for anyone who wants to understand the full story of Russian interference in the 2016 presidential election.
